Within just days of the Solemnity of All Saints and of the Commemoration of the faithful departed, this Sunday's Liturgy invites us once again to reflect upon the mystery of the resurrection of the dead. The Gospel presents Jesus confronted by several Sadducees, who did not believe in the resurrection and considered the relationship with God only in the dimension of earthly life. Therefore, in order to place the resurrection under ridicule and to create difficulty for Jesus, they submit a paradoxical and absurd case: that of a woman who'd had seven husbands, all brothers, who died one after the other. Thus came the malicious question posed to Jesus: in the resurrection, whose wife will the woman be?

Jesus does not fall into the snare and emphasizes the truth of the resurrection, explaining that life after death will be different from that on earth. He makes his interlocutors understand that it is not possible to apply the categories of this world to the realities that transcend and surpass what we see in this life. He says, in fact: "The sons of this age marry and are given in marriage; but those who are accounted worthy to attain to that age and to the resurrection from the dead neither marry nor are given in marriage". With these words, Jesus means to explain that in this world we live a provisional reality, which ends; conversely, in the afterlife, after the resurrection. We will no longer have death as the horizon and will experience all things, even human bonds, in the dimension of God, in a transfigured way. Even marriage, a sign and instrument of God in this world, will shine brightly, transformed in the full light of the glorious communion of saints in Paradise.

The "sons of heaven and of the resurrection" are not a few privileged ones, but are all men and all women, because the salvation that Jesus brings is for each one of us. And the life of the risen shall be equal to that of angels (cf. v. 36), meaning wholly immersed in the light of God, completely devoted to his praise, in an eternity filled with joy and peace. But pay heed! Resurrection is not only the fact of rising after death but is a new genre of life which we already experience now; it is the victory over nothing that we can already anticipate. Resurrection is the foundation of the faith and of Christian hope.

Sanctuary Lamp - Intentions of Bob Hilton

“The life in the Spirit, expressed in the sacraments, cannot be suffocated by a bureaucracy that prevents access to the grace of the Spirit, the initiator of the conversion of heart. How many times we ourselves, priests or bishops, create so much bureaucracy to give a sacrament, to welcome people, that people say: “No I do not like this,” and leave and often they do not see in us the power of the Spirit who regenerate, who makes us new. So we have the huge responsibility for proclaiming Christ, crucified and risen, enlivened by the breath of the Spirit of love.” Pope Francis, 27th October

Pea and Pie Supper - A wonderful night was had by all who attended this fundraising supper. The food and wine were excellent – it was a great community event. We also managed through your generosity of donations to raise £356.50 in support of your local Air Ambulance Service <https://theairambulanceservice.org.uk>
